INTRODUCTION.

At the meeting of the Alumni Association, during the Reunion of 1905, it was decided that a revision of the Alumni Record should be made and the record of Alumni be completed to date.

Mr. Elon G. Reynolds was, in July, appointed Editor. When he left for California in January, 1906, he placed the Alumni list in the hands of the Secretary, practically correct at that date.

Hillsdale Alumni, however, are characteristic Americans, fertile in plans and swift in execution, so their changes of residence and occupation are many and frequent. It requires, therefore, constant watchfulness and the co-operation of the whole student body to keep the records up-to-date.

Any mistakes or omissions which occur may be due to the inexperience of the new Secretary or the failure of the Alumni to remember that what is not announced cannot be published.

The previous Records contained all articles delivered at the different reunions. We have no apology to offer that so few are given in this, only the statement that the Alumni Reunion of 1905 was so merged into the General Semi-Centennial of the College that no addresses were given before the Alumni Association proper.

Of the many brilliant and witty speeches of commencement week, most were by Alumni, but all were extempore, and to our regret not preserved.

To all who have assisted by word, letter or newspaper clipping in making this record, thanks are tendered, also to the Alumni of Hillsdale, who have given much encouragement and help.

By order of the Committee,

ABBIE DUNN SLAYTON

Secretary of the Alumni Association.

1905.

The Endowment Committee reported progress in the work of planning for an enlarged Endowment of the school. Funds for work upon the proposed plan had been raised and the outlook was encouraging. Mr. J. E. Cummins, the Chairman of the Endowment Committee, gave a stirring address upon the relations of the Alumni to the College and its endowment. The same Committee was continued, with power to increase its membership or to fill vacancies.

The officers elected for the term 1905 to 1910 were:

tax. The arranging for publication of this Record was placed in the hands of the Prudential Committee.

The Treasurer, C. H. Gurney, reported collections of annual Alumni Tax, $71; total amount in treasury as $133.56. He called attention to the fact that care was being taken to collect this money at graduation and that those of the old students who had not received the Alumni Record had forgotten to pay the tax.

During the week of Commencement there were over two hundred of the Alumni in Hillsdale and the whole week was practically an Alumni meeting, the attendance of old students and friends being the largest ever known.

There was no formal banquet, but class reunions were many and pleasant. '75 had largest attendance, '76 largest per cent, of those living, '72 second.

The informal reception held in the Central Building Thursday evening was attended with pleasure by the Alumni and their families.

The list of Alumni speakers through this memorable week is too long for insertion, and the speeches too spontaneous to be caught by cold type.

The Alumni Endowment

June 17, 1870, the Trustees of the College invited the Alumni to endow a professorship, and the Alumni Association the same year appointed a committee to raise funds for that purpose. No active canvass was made until in October, 1871, when pledges were secured to the amount of $1,000. In December, 1872, the committee issued its first circular. Subsequent to that time circulars and printed statements have been issued in 1873, 1876, 1890, 1900 and 1905. During these years there has been raised and paid in to the College Treasury $10,334.98. There is also in hand an assignment of a paid-up life insurance policy of $2,500, and notes amounting to about $275.

The Alumni Professorship should be endowed with at least $25,000, and the alumni of the College are especially requested to make provisions for increase of this fund and bring the alumni endowment up to the full $25,000. A number of the endowments of the College have been named at $15,000, but with such a large and loyal body of alumni, we believe that $25,000 should be the amount for which we should strive. The president of the present Alumni Endowment Committee is Mr. Joseph Cummins, 910, 160 Washington Street, Chicago, Ill., and he would be very glad to enroll your name as one who will contribute to this fund.

Of the amount already raised for this endowment, nearly all has been paid in by members of the classes from 1860 to 1876 inclusive. The records show less than two hundred dollars paid in by those graduating since 1876. Does this mean that the classes of the last thirty years are less loyal to Alma Mater, or, have they failed to appreciate her needs, or, has the endowment committee neglected to call their attention to these needs? If every alumnus of the institution will loyally accept the situation and do his best, this Alumni Endowment can soon be completed to the full amount desired, $25,000.

What Brings Us Here?

Address Before the Eleventh Reunion of the Alumni of Hillsdale College, June 20th, 1900, by Will M. Carleton Class '69.

We have come from all points of the compass. For several days the glittering metals of every trunk line of railroad have borne the weight of students bound for Hillsdale; some of them for the last time—none of them for the first.

It is not necessary for me to say with what joy they are greeted; with what smiles they accost each other. The old Alma Mater, decked as ever in June days like a bride for her wedding, would primp still more jauntily if she could. The trees upon the campus—each a flagstaff waving its own dainty streamers of green—act almost as if they knew that those who planted them had come back to see how tall they had grown. The flowers smile at us as if they would inform us that they are descendants of the bouquets that we used to throw at each other on festal nights and days. The humble grass beneath our feet seems to crave a part in the grand chorus of welcome, and to whisper to us that it is feebly trying to appear as green as did we, when we first came here!

But was it really the trains that brought us? No! not the huge caravans of iron that travel with steel hoofs from edge to edge of the Continent; but something more powerful than they: something without which they could never have existed; or, having existed, could not have been moved.

And that something was Sentiment—Sentiment—without which our earth would be only a planet-skeleton, fit for the residence of neither gods nor men; Sentiment—which pushes and pulls and magnetizes, all at once; Sentiment—without which an education is a mere package of more or less accurate statistics; Sentiment—without which government is only an assortment of great and petty tyrannies; Sentiment—without which business is nothing but a series of alternate and reciprocal robberies; Sentiment—without which a college is a mere factory of human phonographic cylinders, expected, whenever the machinery is set in motion, to give out the same dismal mechanical sounds; Sentiment—without which a student is to be most profoundly pitied; because the more he knows the less he gets out of life. Heaven help the man who lacks it; and especially those nearest him! The women—God bless them—all possess it, and are its rightful treasure-holders and custodians.

But the great edifice of Sentiment, with its foundations in the heart and its domes looming from the utmost height of intellect, has within it different apartments—different shrines.

We are here today partly from that sentiment which clings around the love of locality; which takes you back amid alternate smiles and sobs, to the homestead where you were born, as a baby, romped and shouted joyously as a child, and left regretfully though determinedly as man or woman. The same sentiment that makes you dream sometimes that you returned to that homestead, found all of the former inmates there—found part of them there—or found none of them there. It is the same sentiment that makes you love the furrows upon the wrinkled cheek of the old farm, or the tanned walls of the old shop, or the lazy, floating dust of the old office, stabbed in twain by a shaft of light from Memory's sun. It is the same sentiment that bids us rear memorials upon memory-hallowed ground, until every historic hilltop gleams with monuments—exclamation-points of fame!

But that sentiment alone is not enough to secure a gathering of the clans. Old localities fade and change, and are often, so to speak, covered with new ones. Dig thirty feet in Roman soil, if you would find the real place where Antony delivered his oration over the dead Caesar! Remember that Byron could in the last years of his life have bought the whole plain of Marathon for a few pounds—it was a little more than a strip of desert. The battlefield of Waterloo is now only an acreage of farm-land, and the trolley-car runs where cannon-wheels scarred the hills of Gettysburg.

The sun shines as brightly, the birds sing as sweetly, the ripples upon yonder lake as silvery as ever; but in the re-greeting of any locality we have to withstand the opposition of two forces: change in the locality and change in ourselves. If some of us see a phantom college where the new one stands, we are not to be blamed. We remember that for years it had been an intellectual light upon the hill that irradiated all the surrounding region; we remember that on one dread night it shed abroad the lurid and mournful glow of destruction, and shrank into dust. No! the love of locality—however dear it may be—might not alone serve to bring us back!

We are here partly from that sentiment which loves Reminiscence. It is a joy sometimes, to get off the monotone of today and run the sweet-sounding scales of the yesterdays. Time is a clarifier; it purifies the memory. We get the gleam of the past, without its edge, the journeys without their fatigue; the feasts without the bills; the midnight pranks without the daylight discipline. The fragrance of the roses is wafted to us, long after the thorns have decayed forever. It is this that renders old men so tenacious of old methods and old times; it is this that has made Auld Lang Syne the battle-song of the great never-conquered past!

But Reminiscence alone would not have called us here: it can be indulged anywhere; alone; or better, with one or two or more old friends chancing to meet, as alumni will, in various parts of the world. How often in my travels have I lingered till daylight commenced putting the stars to bed—talking over old Hillsdale reminiscences!

And this brings us, past the sentiment of locality—past the sentiment of reminiscence—into that of comradeship. To those who have hearts that cling, whether with demonstrative or undemonstrative methods, it is a joy to gather within their own hand of an old friend—an old comrade. It is a pleasure to see the bloom of the nature of which we knew the germ; to mark how that sketch of a character, whose youthful outlines we knew so well, has been filled up and rounded into the completeness of its mission. It is a pleasure to meet old friends when the rivalry itself is so dead that we cannot even find its grave; it is a joy to meet former comrades and co-workers, when the friendship has grown from blossom to fruitage. It is at least interesting to meet even those who did not understand us, or understood us too well; and to feel that we have benefited by the petty persecutions they took such pains to apply. The word comrade, in these days, is a greater one even than that of brother; for all brothers are not comrades, while all comrades are brothers!

It would naturally seem that one of the greatest delights of Heaven must be, that acquaintances can there meet and live over again all that was best and purest and sweetest and truest in their former days of association, and leave out all that was unworthy, and malevolent, and poisonous, and malignant—when comradeship has come out of the wilderness—has come back from the wild variations of narrowness and selfishness, to those grand harmonies of the soul that live forever.

But comradeship, as the years go on, has its penalties; it is bitter-sweet. You cannot clasp a hand here to day, but it may remind you of some other one for which you may reach, but cannot find. I do not need to call upon our dead by name; they mention themselves to us at every step. Since the last reunion, Death has delighted in throwing its gloom over some of the brightest of our number. Let me for a moment quote the dead in behalf of the dead: let the cold lips of one we all loved peculiarly well, and who lately started for the great reunion above—let those lips speak a few words to us.

A quarter of a century ago, he said, in the course of an alumni history which he had been asked to prepare:

"Those dead of ours—how shall we honor them? They were the brightest and the best—the noblest of us all! And they are gone, like stars from out the sky, leaving the world a little darker than it was.

"Yet love will dream, and truth will trust
(Since He who knows our need is just),
That somehow, somewhere, meet we must!
Alas for him who never sees
The stars shine thro' the cypress trees;
Who has not learned in hours of faith
The truth to sense and flesh unknown,
That Life is ever lord of Death,
And Love can never lose its own!"

And so it is, Alumni who yet live in this last year of the century; so far as this world is concerned, comradeship grows mournful, and fails. The twenty men who dined together and vowed to meet again each year thereafter, found, you remember, only nineteen there next time—then seventeen—thirteen—eleven—and so on—till the last one sat by himself and died at that very table from loneliness.

Some are here from a sentiment of gratitude to those who made this place ready for them. We paid for our education—and we did not; we could not. We found the buildings here—the recitation-rooms with doors ajar—the instructors, equipped and paid. Not for a hundredth part of that did all the money taken here from students suffice. We paid for it about as much as, when procuring our tickets, we bought the railroad trains that carried us here. No: strong, study men and faithful women and not undergraduates, made this college; and we as alumni should be grateful to them. How? By repaying it. Not to them directly: most of them are gone. You cannot lift a frozen hand and put back into it money it has bestowed; but you can pay it by furthering the objects that were so near their hearts.

There are some who get the benefit of a college course, and then give the institution a kick, and leave it; never paying any attention to it afterwards, except to administer to it now and then an additional kick. I am not here to criticize such, for probably I do not know all the circumstances connected with the matter; they may have grievances or limitations of which I am not aware. But I believe in reciprocity—both before and after one receives a favor.

Some are here from a sentiment of benevolence. They see students struggling, just as they used to struggle, and they want to aid them, and to learn how to best aid them. Few investments are so profitable as judicious help to an industrious and honest student. But like all good acts, this can be overdone. There is such a thing as helping a student so much that you help him into helplessness; of writing all over a college your name in gold letters, and leaving out all the remainder of the alphabet. But when you help people just enough to aid them to help themselves you are aiding God—for that is His kind of helpfulness.

I earnestly hope the time will come when rich men's educational benefactions will be sprinkled among the smaller and livelier colleges, instead of poured upon one until it grows gross and unwieldy through its very surplus of nutriment!

There are some here from a sentiment of ambition—both for themselves and the college with which their names have been and must forever be associated. This is a most praiseworthy feeling. It is never creditable to an alumnus, to let his old cherishing mother die for the lack of a little cherishing.

Hillsdale College has been put to death a number of times on paper, and on the red page of the vituperative tongue. It has been "laid out" again and again, with grave-clothes draped around its inanimate form and upon its eyes one of the smallest coins of the realm; but this present reunion looks as if it still lived, and was bound to do so in spite of all detraction; in spite of those who would rule or ruin, or, worse, would rule and ruin. Once, when a great and sudden sorrow had befallen the institution, one of the professors declared, in public, with tears flowing down his cheeks, that the college would live on and on, in spite of all that misfortune and malice could do! and who is not glad that his prophecy, though made many years ago, has thus far been fulfilled; that the college lives, and—for which we are all thankful—so does the professor. Let no one who enrolls himself among the progressives of the world, throw an obstacle in the way of a college. If this country is to be the richest on earth, then it ought to be the most intelligent. Property without knowledge is like great quantities of food without oxygen mixed in it; a burden and a curse.

But all these sentiments are as nothing, if we leave out a sentiment of the hereafter; if we forget the fact that time, on this earth, is only one golden grain and one leaden grain out of eternity's unfenced and unbounded harvest-field—that stretches in all directions far out and beyond the utmost range of human sight and comprehension.

Six months from now we may be many miles from here, we think? Six months from now we will be a hundred and eighty million miles from here—for the earth will have swung to the other side of its orbit. And yet that immense distance is not enough even to form the base of a triangle with which to measure an itinerary to the nearest constellation. In the same way Time cannot even furnish a parallax for eternity.

Through whatever lens we may look into the stupendous firmament of the future, we must look; it is all around us and above us, and beneath us. No thread of thought but is intertwined with the mysterious hereafter; no banner of learning but must flutter and lean against the sky. No deed but must depend for its endorsement upon millions of ages yet to come. We have aeons in which to work; not a note in the loud chorus of humanity, but will be heard when the glittering present that flashes around us has become a mere fragment of antiquity.

Let us at each step of our progress, be prepared to do our part of the great duty of the world. When, like the illustrious Hillsdale student whose monument Hillsdale will some day erect, we are asked if we are ready, let us, like him, be ready, and evince that readiness with prompt action; and though it is not ours to throw new colors upon the map of the world—though it may not be ours to write across the pages of the Orient the autograph of our young Republic, yet we can every one of us have something to do—have much to do—with shaping the great map of eternity.

Thus have I, brothers and sisters of the Eleventh Reunion, tried to review the different sentiments that have brought us here; and now I plead that all these sentiments be cultivated and cherished from year to year and from decade to decade—in spite of the difficulties that assail them—and let us strive for the continued upbuilding of our glorious institution, remembering that the ways of Providence are many and unexpected, and we never know what splendors the mysterious future may have in store for steadfast faithfulness; believing that because of Hillsdale's days of usefulness the day of its exaltation may come, and hoping that the great and mighty lakes that border this peninsula will some time be famous chiefly because of their nearness to Hillsdale College.

The Things Which Remain

J. N. GREENE, Class '91

Read at the Quinquennial Alumni Exercises, Hillsdale College, June 20, 1900

The Hand of Time hath penned on Nature's page,
The laws of Change, Decay and final Death;
That all things earthly sometime pass away,
And all things mortal lose their vital breath.
We sometimes question in our finite minds,
If aught of this mortality remains,
If, in this passing of the Seen, is left
A part Unseen, which lives and moves and reigns?
A tiny acorn drops upon the ground
And falls into Death's cold and hard embrace,
Decay, Death's ally, comes with impious hand
And robs it of its nature and its place;
And yet, when years have sped with storm and shine,
And left their silent trace upon the earth,
Lo! where this acorn fell and passed away,
A giant oak reveals a glorious birth,
A babbling brooklet ripples on and on,
And sings its song and journeys toward the sea,
Yet thousands from its waters quench their thirst,
And from its song contented learn to be.
A poet writes some lines and sends them forth,
Into the wide, wide world, he knows not where,
In weary hearts they find a resting place,
And lighten all their load of want and care.
Alas! in thoughtless error we are prone
To judge of things by what we merely see,
And reckon not behind the great Unknown,
What lives Unseen through all eternity.
Death comes through life, and life from death is born,
The endless process e'er goes on and on,
Naught dies but what still lives, somewhere, somehow,
Naught lives but what must die and pass beyond.

The question sometimes comes to each of us,
When living o'er in memory College Days,
What is there left of all the years we toiled,
What now remains that for our effort pays?
Let's only stop and, in our minds compare,
Our thoughts, our aims, our purpose now and then,
Our views of life and duty, hope and faith,
Our attitude toward God and fellow men;
And in the broader vision of life's plan,
The nobler aspirations of the heart,
The loftier ambitions of the mind,
The Will to do, which Truth and Grace impart,
We find the answer which we sought to know,
We see how far we've climbed the upward slope,
And gladly turn our backs on vales below,
And struggle upwards toward the Star of Hope,
We may forget some lessons we have learned,
Forget advice, though given with good will,
But their effect, unconscious, still remains
And hovers round our minds and memories still.
We may forget how Caesar conquered Gaul,
How Alexander all the world subdued,
The truth remains that lands by conquest won,
Have to their victors brought no lasting good.
We may forget the famous siege of Troy,
And all the havoc lovely Helen wrought,
We may forget the tale of Dido's wrongs,
And all the train of woes Aeneas brought,
The fact remains that Sin and Fraud and Wrong,
Must in the end a fearful tribute pay,
To Right and Justice and Long-suffering Truth,

Who, though defied, still hold eternal sway,
 We may forget the Sines and Cossecants,
 The Tangents and the Parallelograms,
 The famous Mount in Algebra we climbed,
 And round whose summit once we skipped like lambs.
 Yet in their place there is an added power
 To grasp life's problems with a firmer will,
 A stronger purpose to go on and up,
 Whate'er the path, however high the hill.
 "Amo" and "Luo" may on memory's page
 Have left a blurred and scarcely visible trace,
 And yet, the gems we found while delving deep
 Among their roots, have not yet lost their grace,
 The melons, grapes and apples, too, are gone
 We cooned so many, many years ago,
 The aches and pains they caused have left no trace,
 Yet memory with their taste is still aglow.
 The girls are gone on whom we used to smile
 In youth's fair morn, when life was but a dream,
 And yet, those smiles so sweet, those glances coy,
 If we would own the truth, how real they seem!
 Those maidens now proud matrons have become,
 And others feel the power of their will,
 Yet many of you can proudly say with me,
 The dearest one of all is with us still.
 Gone are the escapades of Hallowe'en
 And other E'ens when nature riot ran,
 Gone are the foolish things we said and did,
 When youth was just a budding into man,
 And yet, how oft in sober after days,
 The memories of those times come flocking back,
 And leave an after-glow of tender joy,
 That makes us wish that we could call them back.
 Oh College Days! how crowded to the brim
 With joys and pains, with pleasures sad and sweet,
 And yet the happiest days in all life's span,
 In hopes the greatest and the most complete,
 But greater still than all the gifts we've named,
 As coming from our Alma Mater's hand,
 Is that she gave to every one of us,
 An inspiration, great and good and grand.
 A man inspired, no power on earth can stay,
 Base earth born passions cannot keep him down,
 Thrones tremble at his power, and tyrants quail,
 Whene'er he reaches out to grasp their crown.
 A man inspired is not content to dwell
 Amid the vales where ignorance abounds,
 But with his soul on fire, is looking up
 And striving e'er to stand on higher grounds.
 For half a century has our Mother Fair
 With burning words been setting hearts on fire,
 Imbuing them with glorious discontent
 Which urges them yet higher still and higher.
 Where'er you go throughout our broad domain,

O'er mountain heights, o'er hill or dale or dell,
 You'll find her sons and daughters in whose hearts
 Her words of inspiration ever dwell.
 So when our Country in her hour of need,
 Calls loud for men to meet the angry foe,
 Our Mother girds the sword about her sons,
 And with a cheerful summons bids them go.
 For every battle of Manilla Bay,
 She always has her Gridley on the spot,
 To help uphold the glorious Stars and Stripes
 And from their folds wipe out each stain and blot.
 And when Columbia calls for men of worth,
 To come and sit within her Council Hall,
 Help make her laws, and guide the Ship of State,
 She sends her Gardner 'n Hopkins at the call.
 Whene'er a sad or pleasure loving world,
 Sends forth a hungry cry from heart or brain,
 Our Carleton hears the cry and quickly sends
 His songs of Hope which have no minor strain.
 Against the hordes of Ignorance and Sin
 She sends a host of valiant men and strong,
 Who led by Haynes and Bayliss, Crandall, Lord,
 Win victories grand o'er Ignorance and Wrong,
 No field where duty calls or honor waits,
 But there you'll find her sons and daughters too,
 E'en far away as "India's Coral Strand"
 Still working, striving something good to do,
 All praise and honor to those Teachers true,
 Who give the best of life and strength and soul.
 To moulding, crystallizing into form,
 The untrained hearts and minds 'neath their control.
 Though small the pittance which their efforts bring,
 Though few the words of cheer which reach their ears,
 Yet great will be the harvest of their toil,
 And rich the fruitage of the coming years.
 To them may length of years and grace be given,
 To carry on the work so well begun,
 And may the glory of a well spent life,
 Surround the pathway of their setting sun.
 With special thanks let's lift our hearts in praise,
 That by the power of Heaven's gracious Will,
 Our Mother's father—good old Dr. Dunn—
 Is with us still today, is with us still,
 The one shall live till both have passed away,
 Forgetfulness may cling to them in vain,
 For though hearts die and pass beneath the sod,
 Heart's love, heart's hopes and heart's desires remain.
 And may the throng which gathers here today,
 Like glad and happy children trooping home,
 Fill full their Mother's heart with proud new joy.
 Which shall remain through all the years to come.
 And from her Welcome Home may we receive,
 An added inspiration, great and good,
 To nobler thoughts, to grander acts and deeds,
 To purer lives of man—and womanhood.

GENERAL STUDENT LIST

The following list includes the names of all persons matriculating in the literary department of the college. The list is chronologically and alphabetically arranged.

This is inserted by vote of the Alumni and is the result of years of work, and thousands of letters and circulars have been issued to secure data for making the list. Additions and corrections sent to the College Treasurer will be kept on file, and it is hoped a more correct list historically may be the result of such co-operation on the part of old students.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENTS

Students of special departments formerly registered with Heads of Department instead of College Secretary. The following is a list not already included in previous list.

Owing to change of Instructors and Officers and destruction of building the list is incomplete. From lack of data it has not seemed advisable to attempt to classify further or to obtain addresses.

Facts regarding any on this list, if given to the College Treasurer, Grover C. Jackson, will aid in making the file of college students kept in the Treasurer's office correct.
